SOUTHERN HIGHLAND WINES
2009 OLDBURY RESERVE SAUVIGNON BLANC
WINS
AT THE SYDNEY INTERNATIONAL WINE
COMPETITION

Southern Highland Wines, Sutton Forest, has won a Highly Commended at the 2010 Sydney International Wine Competition for their 2009 Oldbury Reserve Sauvignon Blanc. This places the Southern Highland Wine in the top 15% of sauvignon blanc in the world.

Wine Makers Dominic Bosch and Eddy Rossi explain "The reserve Sauvignon Blanc was crafted by selecting the best fruit from our high altitude, Oldbury Road, Estate vineyard. We exploited techniques like cold maceration, and low temperature fermentation in order to preserve the delicate aromas and intense personality of this variety. The Sauvignon Blanc exudes exotic whiffs like gooseberry, lychee, passionfruit and limes, all entangled with green hints of asparagus and capsicum. The palate is seductively round and silky all over. This wine would be best served with seafood, Thai and Chinese dishes.”

The Competition promotes wines of balance, harmony and current drinkability. Currently, still the only major international wine show where, finalists have been judged alongside appropriate food. The entries were assessed by the Panel of 14 judges from six countries [Australia, New Zealand, England, Singapore, Northern Ireland and USA] which included six Masters of Wine and eight other equally highly qualified judges.

You can purchase the 2009 Oldbury Reserve Sauvignon Blanc from Southern Highland Wines, Corner Oldbury Rd and Illawarra Hwy, Sutton Forest or visit the website www.shw.com.au .
